Mr. W. H. Haller, now of Charleston, was home for the 4th. He is another Ironton boy for whom the Register predicts a successful future.

There is too much hoodlumism at the depot of nights, in the absence of the day agent. The marshal might pick up and run in a case or two one of these fine nights.

Rev. Walter E. Boggs will deliver a lecture to the teachers and citizens at the near future. Mr. Boggs comes at the request of Prof. Vance and in the interest of education. His ability as a lecturer and public speaker should insure a crowded house. The date will be announced Thursday evening at the hall at the close of Mr. Patrick's lecture.

Two of these are announced in this issue and others will soon follow. They are all in the interest of education, but the reputation of the lecturers is sufficient guarantee that they will not be dry or commonplace. Everybody cordially invited to attend.

Mary Jones, accused of assaulting Mrs. Stout, and wounding her by shooting with a revolver, was taken before Squire Schwaner at Pilot Knob last Thursday for a hearing. She made application for change of venue, which was granted, and yesterday she appeared before Squire Ake. After hearing her statement and other evidence, the Justice remanded her under a $200 bond to await the action of the grand jury. It is quite likely that Mary will board at the expense of the county until the fourth Monday in October.

Linton celebrated the 4th in great style—picnic, bar-becue, music, dance, speech, drink, smoke, fire-works, etc.

The largest number of people seen in this town since 1876 congregated at Goulding's Park before high noon, and shortly after that hour not a speck was left of 800 loaves of bread and 2,000 pounds of barbecued meat. All day long the crowds came and went—the park was full, the town was full, the streets were full, and very few men got full. But the proceedings were peaceable and orderly, and a general good time reigned all who attended.

On July 10th I will preach on the subject of the Transformation of the human body. Text: Acts 26: 8. The 11 o'clock service will be occupied by answering many arguments brought to bear against the fundamental doctrine of Christianity. 1. It is denied because it contains a mystery. 2. It contradicts the great principles of science. 3. The resurrection is contrary to the immutability of the laws of nature. 4. The objection is that this doctrine embraces a physical impossibility. All are cordially invited.

L. H. THIMBLE,
Pastor M. E. Church.

The Washington County Mass Meeting.

An attaché of the REGISTER attended the Democratic mass meeting at Potosi last Saturday, and is free to say that as an illustration of how the bull-dozing, filibustering and trickery of the politician can override the will of the honest majority in such gatherings, this assembly would be hard to exceed.

It was a contest from start to finish as to who should secure the Congressional delegation—whether Mr. Byrns could carry his own county or whether the delegation would be instructed for Mr. Edgar, of this county. Mr. Edgar, beyond question, had a majority of the vast assemblage, but the bull-dozing, filibustering tactics of the courthouse clique and Potosi politicians, were out of the patience of the crowd, and instructions for Mr. Byrns were finally secured.

Early in the day it became apparent that the meeting was going to be an interesting one, for every train brought large delegations from different parts of the county, and the arrivals by wagon and horseback poured steadily into town all during the morning. Along toward noon there was a heavy rain, but it dampened not the enthusiasm, and the masses still surged into town.

W. S. Anthony and Louis F. Dinning, the leaders of the Byrns faction, were on hand early, and, to the most casual observer, it soon became apparent, that these two, at least, were much disturbed by their worthy Sam. should fail to secure the delegation from his own county. They met every delegation as fast as they arrived, importuned, but-ton-holed and threatened; and, "t'is even said, were spending money in order that Mr. Byrns might secure the vote of "his friends and neighbors." And thus the morning passed; each succeeding hour found the Byrns forces more dejected, more discouraged, and finally almost ready to despair. They were demoralized; they evidenced this in their every move; the situation was desperate and would have to be met by desperate methods.

The chairman of the County Central Committee, H. Wallace, had called the meeting for one o'clock, but when the hour arrived, the Central Committee was closeted in one of the offices of the courthouse and it was half-past one before they put in appearance. Then they proceeded up stairs, where Dr. James, a Byrns man, instead of Mr. Wallace, the chairman, called the mass meeting to order at the same time nominating Dr. Goodkointz, a pronounced Byrns man, of Calcedonia, for permanent chairman. This advantage taken by the temporary chairman, brought forth no little disapproval, and was the first evidence of the methods to which they were willing to resort to carry their end; the opposition promptly placed Mr. Edgar, an Edgar man, in nomination for chairman, and the Byrns men, named as tellers to count the vote, declared Mr. Chancy elected. The gentleman took the chair and H. C. Bell was chosen secretary by acclamation.

Mr. R. F. Marbury, one of the Byrns leaders, then took the floor, and offered the resolution, as the order of business: first, to choose the delegates to the State Convention by ballot; to the St. Louis Judicial, Circuit and Congressional Conventions by division of the house. Mr. Thos. Welch, one of the leaders of the Edgar forces, offered an amendment to elect the Congressional delegates by ballot also. The resolution, with this amendment, was promptly carried. Dr. Goodkointz then moved a reconsideration, which was lost by a large vote. Then followed a scene of disorder and confusion which beggars description: the Byrns men were badly frightened; they had seen their favorite for chairman defeated; their rules for the order of business had been amended in accordance with the desires of the Edgar men. The situation was indeed exciting; the crowd could barely find standing room, and a few were on the corner with "surging humanity." The chair was naming the tellers and calling for a vote by ballot to name the delegates to the State Convention, when Henry Bell, the secretary of the meeting, jumped on the table and declared the convention irregular, saying it should have been rapped to order by Mr. Wallace, the chairman of the central committee, who had issued the call for the meeting. (It may be inserted, by way of parenthesis, right here, that this seems to have been a preconcerted arrangement on the part of the Byrns men; fearing they would be outvoted in the mass meeting, they wanted a flaw in the proceedings so that they could declare them irregular. It is also a little singular that the fact of this irregularity did not occur to Mr. Bell somewhat earlier, for the Central Committee of which he was also secretary, had, as stated, just been in session, and it would be but natural that they should have fully determined who should call the mass meeting to order.)

Before the chair could pay any attention to Mr. Bell's plea of irregularity, however, Judge Dinning got up and said, "We want a free ballot and an honest count; let us go out in the yard. There is too big a crowd here to vote by ballot. Pandemonium followed; the Edgar men insisted on proceeding with the work in accordance with the rules adopted by the convention; the Byrns advocates insisted on going out into the yard. A score of people wanted to be heard at once; there were loud hurrahs and general talking all over the room. The chair rapped again and again for order, but it was in vain. The Byrns men were determined that there should be no further procedure; the Edgar men insisted on proceeding by ballot for congressional delegates. For one whole hour this disorder continued; not a thing was done; the patience of the crowd was at last worn out and they finally agreed to descend to the yard. Many, in the meantime, had quit the room in disgust and left for their homes.

The tactics of the Byrns crowd prevailed, and one got into the yard, and they changed the order of business and decided to vote for congressional delegates, first, and that by division, instead of ballot as was previously agreed upon. After possibly half an hour the division was made and instructions were secured for Byrns by a majority, so they maintained, about ninety in a total vote of over 300. In making the division the Byrns men resorted to pulling and hauling, threats, coaxing and every means in their power to carry men from Edgar's into their own ranks; and in many instances they were successful; candidates for future favors did not care to incur the wrath of all the politicians of the county; this the Byrns men evidently knew, and that was why they didn't want a private ballot; they knew they could bulldoze many a man into their lines in a division, who really favored Mr. Edgar.

The delegates to the State and Judicial conventions were then chosen, without any contest at all, and the meeting then adjourned.

The Edgar men came from all over the county, and were representatives from the masses; the Byrns stronghold was in Potosi and the adjoining vicinity. As an evidence of how badly frightened the congressmen's friends were, let the skeleton of a delegation, it may be stated that the Potosi crowd, which was strong for Stone, for Governor, agreed not to interfere with instructions for Dalton, for fear such a move might hurt Sam's interests. They were none the less opposed to Mr. Dalton, but they were willing to sacrifice Stone's interests rather than place Sam Byrns in the humiliating position of being beaten in his own county, and that with scarcely any work on Mr. Edgar's part to such end.

Viewing the situation calmly and dispassionately, it was simply this: Mr. Edgar had a good majority of the mass meeting, and could and would have secured the delegation, if the vote had been taken by ballot; his forces were out-generalled, however; they could not cope with the scheming and designing of the other side, who, from their better advantage were determined, either on a Byrns delegation or preventing the accomplishment of any work whatever. In substantiation of this view of the matter it may be stated that, after the mass meeting, Wm. S. Anthony, prosecuting attorney of Washington county and leader of the Byrns forces, said: "We didn't want a vote by ballot for if that had been taken, you would have beaten us."

The foregoing is simply a statement of facts; the truthfulness of which can be proven by as reputable men as there are in the State of Missouri. We reproduce them for the consideration of the Democrats of the Thirteenth district; are they going to countenance such methods and such practices? Are they willing to acquiesce in this mode of overriding the will of the masses, for the benefit of one particular man? Let the different counties answer! We have no doubt as to what that answer will be.

Obituary.

ELIZABETH ROTHBERGER was born in Germany, August 20th, 1820, and died at Edge Hill, Reynolds county, Mo., December 29th, 1891, aged 71 years.

Mother Rothberger, with her husband and six children, emigrated to America about six years ago. She was an amiable Christian, a devoted member of her church, a loving wife and fond mother. She passed from time to time peacefully, surrounded by husband, children, grandchildren and friends.

Two days after the death of our mother, our eldest brother, CHRISTIAN ROTHBERGER, in his forty-fifth year.

For twenty-eight years he was a constant sufferer with consumption, and yet not a murmur arose from his lips, but he always comforted his friends by saying, "God doeth all things well." He was a faithful member of the church and a devoted and sincere Christian.

GOTTIELE ROTHBERGER, our dear youngest, brother was born July 1st, 1862, and departed this life June 28th, 1892, aged 30 years.

On Friday, June 24th, as Gottiele was starting to the field with the reaper, one of the horses became frightened and ran away, throwing him off with such force as to break his leg in three places and to produce confusion of the brain. After the first few minutes he sank into a stupor, from which he never aroused. Although Gottiele had lived among us but a short time he made many friends and died mourned by all his acquaintances. The aged husband and father, the brothers and sisters of this afflicted family have the warmest sympathy of their neighbors, who so kindly aided this family of strangers in a strange land in their deep distress. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Matthew Adams of Goodland, Griefs were with tears for the loved ones.

Taken from earth and its ill: Weep o'er the hands softly folded. Over the heart now so still. Hark! 'tis the voices of angels floating so softly down—Earth hath the pall and the coffin. Heaven the robe and the crown. A FRIEND.

FOR SALE—Two good horses—will work anywhere. Apply to Joe Schreiner, Middlebrook, Mo.

In Memoriam.

June 19th, 1892, Rev. NELSON ADAMS went home, aged 83 years and 9 months. He was born in 1809, in Rowan county, Tennessee. He was married in 1830, in Cumberland county, Tennessee, to Rebecca Stevens, who having borne him fifteen children, twelve of whom survive him, went before him by ten years.

"Into the land of the departed, Into the silent land."

For his second wife, he chose a worthy widow named Henson, who survives him.

He came to Missouri in 1833. This country was then the paradise of hunters, being overrun with all kinds of wild game. As a hunter he soon won success and fame. In 1840, the hand of a dead child led him to God, and he and his wife joined the church. In 1845 being well approved of by the brethren he was licensed to preach. He was ardently attached to the United Baptist church. To the promotion of his welfare, he consecrated his heart and his hand with his purse in it. Whilst his strong convictions and vigorous spirit led him into some things which a less resolute man would have avoided, yet the end crowns the work. He was a successful minister of the gospel. This is shown by two facts. Many were added to the church through his labors. And of nine surviving sons, four are zealous ministers. He continued in the work until old age laid him aside.

Being a fearless Union man during the war his Scotch neighbors some of whom will read this communication, drove him and his family away on peril of their lives, stole everything they could carry away, and burnt the rest. But with splendid pluck he returned at the earliest possible day, more than repaired his losses, again took his place at the head of every movement that aided in building up the country, and dispensed over all a generous hospitality. Few men have done more to aid the country. To fix the exact status of such a man is no easy task. His faults were those of the times and the community in which he lived, his virtues, neither few nor small, were his own. To say that his end was peace is but to repeat the word of God.

"Let me die, When the blue heaven bends o'er me lovingly. Awaiting to receive my soul to its clear depths. And when around my bed wife, children, weeping friends Are gathered. And the calm voice of prayer And holy hymning shall my soul prepare. To go and be at rest with kindred spirits. Spirits that have blessed the human brotherhood. With labors, loves and counsels for their good." So died Nelson Adams.

On the 21st of June he was buried beside his first wife at Goodland church. His funeral sermon was preached to a crowd much too large for the house, by THOMAS CALAHAN.

Goodland, Mo.
